City manager straw ballot slated

PAHOKEE - Pahokee voters will again have their semi-annual chance to cast their ballots in a straw poll on the city manager form of govern-ment at the end of October. The straw poll has been scheduled for Tuesday, Oc-tober 25, slightly over two

City seeks changes in franchise

BELLE GLADE - The Belle Glade city commission has aligned itself with efforts by other city officials in the county to alter the Florida Power and Light franchise.

The portion of the franchise that most concerns Belle Glade commissioners and other municipal officials through the county deals with the payment of franchise fees to the city. Richard G. Simmons, West Palm Beach city manager, stated in a letter to south Florida municipal officials that the franchise fee is collected by FPL from all customers in franchise areas.

lected by FPL from all customers in franchise areas.

A recent Public Service Commission order prevented the utility company from collecting franchise surcharges from customers who reside in areas not covered by a franchise.

The letter states that the company invests the funds and pays the franchise fees charged by the cities after the fees earn interest.

That interest is used by the utility to improve the entire system, not just the franchise system, according to Simmons' letter.

Belle Glade's commissioners approved a motion to have Attorney John E. Baker draft a resolution requesting that the utility company be required to pay the interest earned on investment of the franchise charges to the city, or to reimburse the franchise area customer with lower rates.

West Palm Beach is apparently spearheading an effort to renegotiate all municipal franchises in south Florida as a group.

Twenty-seven cities in south Florida, including Belle Glade and Pahokee, will have to renegotiate the FPL franchise between now and 1989.

Lovell talks to Pahokee city council, audience

PAHOKEE - Sam Lovell offered a few per-sonal comments on several issues at the Pahokee city council meeting Tuesday night, August 9.

Lovell, who is a member of the Palm Beach

County School Board, said he was offering his comments as a citizen and not as a member of the school board.

"About the time I graduated from Pa

High School, I remember we used to sit around the coffee shop and say what Pahokee needed was five good funerals," Lovell told the five member council. "We've had five good funerals and nothing much has changed, and that was

Lovell said "school people" have "defensive attitudes" towards education issues and displayed copies of several newspaper headlines and read excerpts from several newspaper ar-

He then stated that parents of school children don't get a "true reflection" with percentile ratings of the type of work their children are doing. Those ratings only tell them how their children compare to others.

Lovell also discussed the integration of the public school system. He said if all the students in Glades Day School, Christian Day School and St. Peter's Lutheran School, were enrolled in the public school system in their home towns, Pahokee's school system would be about 22½ percent white.

"They've been saying if you build the school on the other side of town, the whites would come back to it," said Lovell. "Well, that's not necessarily true."

Lovell returned to city politics before concluding his remarks.

"I think the city of Pahokee has done real well under the mayor form of government and you've kept the taxes down. And I thank you for living."

Lovell left the council chambers after com-pleting his remarks.

City closer to floating bonds

Two weeks away

BELLE GLADE - Refunding of the water and sewage revenue bonds the city of Belle Glade floated last year is about two weeks away, according to a consultant hired to serve as the city's advisor in the refunding measure.

Toby Wagner, president of Southeastern Municipal Bonds, Incorporated of Orlando, told the commissioners Monday night, August 8 that the city's should be ready to float the refunding issue in about two weeks, but that it may want to delay floating the bonds until market conditions improve.

He said current market conditions are "terrible," but added it could improve in the near future, so the city should put itself in a position where it could take advantage of an improved market.

He said his firm is working toward preparing the city for the sale.

He also recommended the city sell the bonds have been sold in a negotiated sale, "More often than not, in today's market, bonds have been sold in a negotiated sale," Wagner told the commissioners.

He said the advantage of the competitive sale would be that city officials could determine when they wanted to float the issue and thus have better control over what type of market conditions the were issued in.

A competitive sale would have to be advertised about 10 days in advance and would reduce the city's control over market conditions that affect the city's deal.

He suggested the city allow the market to aid in the decision on when to sell the bonds. A sensitivity analysis' the company had developed and submitted to the city in any sis' the company had developed and submitted to the city in a sensitivity analysis' the company had developed and submitted to the city in the said that company checked the analysis stated the city would save about $238,000 more per every quarter percent drop in the interest rate, or it could save $238,000 in the interest rate, or it could save $238,000 in the interest rate, or it could save $238,000 in the interest rate, or it could save $238,000 in the market to said that, what he had great in the rate.

The city would then be able to save almost the same amount of money as it could save if the interest rate were nine percent, half a percent lower.

The city commission accepted Wagner's recommendations, including a suggestion that it name three firms as counderwriters.

The other two firms are the Leedy Corporation out of Orlando and William R. Hough and Company from North Palm Beach.

A pinch of salt

Rev. Robert W. Carlson

It won't be long before the school year begins already the stores are running their back-to school specials.

Our son goes to kindergarten this year, so my wife and I visited schools, asked alot of questions and spent many hours together talking it over, trying to decide where he will receive the best education.

One conclusion we came to is that no school is perfect and that the quality of his education will depend on the interest we show.

Most parents want their children to get the best education possible, and do show an interest in the school they have chosen. But education is more than reading, writing and arithmetic; children need a moral and spiritual education that no school can provide.

more than reading, writing and arithmetic, children need a sorral and spiritual education that no school can provide. Your child need to be in Sunday School. And you should be there too. Children have a natural interest in spiritual things, but that desire to learn about Jesus can be destroyed by an apathetic parent. The following poem, written by a pathetic parent. The following poem, written by an unknown author, says it better than I can.

Daddy had a little boy.

His soul was white as snow;
He never went to Sunday school

Cause Daddy wouldn't go
He never heard the Word of God

That thrills the childsh mind—
While other children went to class,
This child was left behind.

As he grew from babe to youth,
Dad saw to his dismay,
A soul that once was snowy white
Become a dingy gray.

Dad even started back to church
And Bible study, corn do?'

The preacher tried and tried, and said,
"We're just too far behind;
I tried to tell you years ago,
But you would pay no mind.'
And so another soul was lost,
That once was white as snow;
Sunday school would have helped,
But Daddy wouldn't go.

"And What Not

The state of our society

Down in Dade County last week, so I read in the paper, an Organized Crime Bureau team (and those are heavy-duty beagles, you betcha) seized two marijuana plants under somewhat extra-ordinary circumstances.

two marijuana plants under somewhat extraordinary circumstances.

A pot plant growing outside was glimpsed by a neighbor who called the police - quite possibly on the 911 emergency line lest the owner harvest it, dry it, and smoke the evidence before the constanulary could get there.

Down at HG, the OCB went into action. A detective, donning his Southern Bell Telephone Co. supervisor's disguise, fearlessly scouted, the territory and did, indeed, find a marijuana plant.
He also found the owner. She was a 29-year-old lady busily repotting plants (not pot) on her patio.
No doubt hoping to disarm her, the detective commented on the pot plant. The lady replied that she thought it was a pretty plant but somewhat scraggily.

Well, to make a long story short, the detective got a warrant to seize the plant. Then, with a three-man backup, he returned to the house. With drawn guns, they lined up at the doorway in what I assume is some kind of anti-ambush maneuver.

The lady invited them inside.

I pause here to share a putzelment. Since she'd

The lady invited them inside.

I pause here to share a puzzlement. Since she'd met the detective earlier posing as a telephone company man, did she think these were all phone repairmen? I guess not if they were in uniform. But didn't she say something to the detective, like: "Do you monlight for the police department?" The newspaper account skips ever this part, unfortunately.

Inside the house, the lady showed them her other marijunan plant – one she said she was prouder of because it wasn't so scraggily as the one outdoors.

outdoors.

She was, of course, placed under arrest for cultivating an illegal substance and told she was being taken in for booking. Explaining that she wasn't properly dressed for going to jail, she asked for time to change into her jail dress, or a reasonable facstimile.

reasonable facsimile.

It must have been about then that the gendarmes decided '.ey weren't dealing with your usual organize' "rainnal so they offered to book her right there at the dining room table in exchange for her written promise to appear in court. They left with the two plants and one of the officers was quoted as saying later that she obviously wasn't a major drug supplier. A somewhat less than profound observation under the circumstances.

ficers was quoted as saying later that she obviously wann't a major drug supplier. A somewhat less than profound observation under the circumstances. Now you may think I'm poking fun at policemen. Not true. I have tremendous respect for the risks and dangers lawmen take. What they can never afford to take are chances. Every rusted of the shrubbery may be a rat. On the other hand, it may be a kitten.

That's why I find the story both funny and sad. City police, in particular, become so battle-tensor in dealing with criminals, they are baffled when they meet up with an ordinary citizen who has mariyuan plant I can believe the bedy didn't know it was a mariyuan plant I can believe the because I had never seen one until recently—and then I saw it in sheriff's office. And I would venture to guess many law-abiding citizens don't know what a sheriff's office. And I would venture to guess many law-abiding citizens don't know what on the first go-round the detective could have believed her and helped her destcrive the plant outside along with the one in the house. But he didn't dare do that. He had to proceed by the book. From the disguise to the warrant to the armed confrontation. It makes you laugh with tears in your eyes at what has happened to our society.

We hope things are back to normal in South Bay. For the last month, things have been in a bit of a turmoil because of the allegations surrounding City Manager Lomax Harrelle.

We don't want to decide which side is right in the dispute between Southern Bell and its striking employees. That's to be settled at the bargaining table.

We do, however, think the strike has raised some valid questions concerning communication between the employees and the employer.

After talking with a handful of picketing employees, we were surprised to learn that many of them didn't seem to be totally aware of why they were striking and what the dispute was

Like all cities, South Bay has problems, but, unlike many cities, it has shown that, given the time, the resources and the opportunity, it can

And he couldn't agree more with Gov.
Graham's committement to saving the Everglades
("The Everglades... A national treasure.") "I'ks certainly the thing to do," Timer said.
Graham said the the three appointments made Friday are based on the "special emphasis" his administration is initiating to preserve and restore the Kissimee/Okeechobee/Everglades evistem.

Timer makes

You might call this one the story of the ometown boy who made good. Timer Powers was born in Miami Beach and aised in Clewiston. His daddy, an engineer for United States Sugabo, died when Timer was still a young boy.

raised in Clewiston.

His daddy, an engineer for United States Sugar.
Co., died when Timer was still a young boy.
As a boy of 8 or 9, he marched up to Dan McCarthy one day and asked if there might be an opening for a progressive young man after school and on weekends.

McCarthy was so impressed with the lad's spunk that he found something for him to do.
After graduating from Clewiston High School in 1954. Timer went on to the University of Florida and earned his bachelors degree.

He never returned to Clewiston to live fulltime after that, although his sister. Nancy Powers, and an aunt, Helen Roberts, still live here.
Despite an absense of almost 30 years, however, he still calls Clewiston home and almost everyone who remembers him does so fondly.

He went on to become a Martin County commissioner for 12 years (1964-1976) and is today president of Indiantown Gas Co.
Timer made the front page of the Palm Beach
Post Saturday, Aug. 6, when it was announced that Gov. Bob Graham had appointed him to the South Florida Water Management. District.
After a full day's activities at SFWMD headquarters in West Palm Tuesday, Timer, now 47, told Boilerplate, "I'm excited about the opportunity."

"I have selected individuals to serve on the board whose committment to the Everglades is strong and dedicated," Graham said.

Timer ta nickname that he had legalized some yearsafoo — but that is another story) is now in a position to do a great deal of good affecting millions of people.

"I look forward to the opportunity to work on the board during such an important time. There are 1000 people a day moving to Florida. We are soon to be the fourth largest state in the nation." he said.

soon to be the fourth largest state in the nation," he said.

Most of those moving into the state are settling in the area served by the SFWMD.

Effective water conservation and management have implications hard to fathom, but it is probably impossible to overstate the situation. Despite the importance of the things Timer Powers has achieved and doubtless will achieve in the future, he remains down to earth and remembers from whence he came.

"Dan and Ruth McCarthy both had a lot to do with keeping me straight through the years," he said.

And then before long, he was reminiscing about his other friends in the Glades. "Do you know Beryl Bowden?" he asked. "She would claim me."

Beryl Bowden: he again.

Somehow we cannot help but think Gov.

Graham couldn't have made a better appointment to the SFWMD, even if Timer Powers is Lawrence Roker asked the commission to make the change because it would allow him to build a triplex on a lot he owns on NW Ninth Street.

He had already obtained permission to build a duplex on the lot from the Building and Zoning Board, but was seeking permission to change his plans to a triplex instead.

The city requires all R2 dwellings to be built on lots of at least 10,000 square feet. The lot Roker wants to construct the duplex on is 127 feet by 50 feet, or 6,850 square feet. The board granted him a variance on that restriction.

"You asked for a duplex and I thought everything was straightened out," said Mayor Donald Tanner. 'Now you come back and want a triplex and that a what caught me off guard." Commissioner Rennick Morris said he would like to see the code made less stringent.

"My question is, why is the building code so stringent?" he asked. "We just have too tight a building code and it's holding back progress." Tanner said the city commission had spent six years working on the revised building code and he didn't want to see the commission and city ignose it in this instance because it would have to grant similar requests in the future.

"To me, I'm looking at South Bay as a model city," said Tanner. "All of a sudden, were fixing to take six years of work and throw it out the window."

"It's gonna be a tax base," Commissioner Verinta Cox told him.

"I have no qualms about getting some new buildings in here, in particular to take up some of these water costs," said Tanner.

The commission will consider the ordinance which includes the 750 for restrictions at its regular meeting August 16.

The city commission is considering refunding the water and sewer revenue bonds issued last year in an effort to save money. The city would refund the 1982 bonds, over nine million dollars, with the funds derived through a bond issue with a lower interest rate.
